Cocktail in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs - Palácio das Necessidades

Palácio das Necessidades is one of the rare constructions that stood the earthquake of 1755. The palace has beautiful gardens, with vast collection of exotic plants. It was a royal residence until the beginning of the XX century (almost all the Portuguese kings lived here), when the monarchy was abolished in Portugal. In 1910, the palace saw its precious art collections divided by several museums. After the establishment of the Republic, Palácio das Necessidades was empty until it was occupied by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, settled there around the year 1926. In May 1952, the Ministry also took up the old Convent's building which had been Lisbon's Military Headquarters, as well as the Headquarters of the Republican Guard.

Cocktail in Palácio de Pena

The National Palace of Pena stands out as the renowned jewel in the crown of the Sintra Hills. The surrounding park, in close harmony with the magical character of the palace, triggers emotions of mystery and discovery. In its nooks and corners, our gaze gets lost amongst its charms.

The coloured tones of the palace, the pinnacle of Romanticism in Portugal and the eternal legacy of Ferdinand II, the King-Artist, opens the doors to the imagination of all those who cross its threshold, with the infinite shades of green painting the surrounding park establishing an idyllic scenario, frequently hidden under the veil of the mists that characterise the Sintra Hills. As if having stepped out of a fairy tale, this has been the place of dreams for all the generation who have passed here and gazed upon its magnificence.
